A MICHIGAN DATE IN HISTORY....

It was on the date of February 8 that former Governor Harry F. Kelly, our 39th governor, died. The year was 1971.

He was a two-term governor, from 1943 to 1947 (back when it was two-year terms). In 1953, six years after he left office, Kelly became the first Michigan governor in over a century to be elected to the state Supreme Court where he served until shortly before his death. Kelly was also a WWI veteran who nearly died of wounds while serving in Europe. After the war he served as mayor of Detroit

Kelly's son, Brian, made himself famous as "Ranger Rick," on the hit television series "Flipper," where he starred from 1964-68. In 1969, a terrible motorcycle accident cut short Brian's acting career although he appeared in several TV-made dramas in the early 1970s.

He remained active in Hollywood and was executive director of the 1982 movie, "Blade Runner." He currently resides in Florida.
